§ 1 Transfer of rights to the repository operator

1. I transfer to the Technische Universität Berlin – represented by the department University Press/Theses of the University Library – the non-exclusive, irrevocable right to store electronically the above described publication and its metadata and to make it publicly available on the Internet. This includes all known and as yet unknown types of use.
2. I give permission to TU Berlin to pass the document on to other libraries, archives, and if necessary, aggregators for the purpose of digital archiving and/or making it publicly available. This includes, for example, the digital archive of the German National Library, as well as other appropriate subject or regional document servers.
3. I give permission for the publication of the metadata, including the abstract, under the Creative Commons Zero license (CC0, see <https://creativecommons.org/publicdomain/zero/1.0/>).
4. I give permission to the University Library to make print-on-demand copies of the work in whole or in part, in print or on digital media, for private or other personal use (§ 53 UrhG DE). The University Library has the right to delegate this service to a third party.
5. I agree with the creation of copies and the conversion of the document to other electronic or physical formats for the purpose of archiving while preserving the integrity of the content.

* Note on self-archiving of previously published material: If your publishing contract grants self-archiving rights, there are no obstacles to an additional digital publication. Please check your publishing contract or <http://www.sherpa.ac.uk/romeo/> to determine whether and under which conditions self-archiving on the institutional repository is possible. If you want the University Library to do this for you, please contact openaccess@ub.tu-berlin.de in advance.

 Note for theses: For the publication of thesis the written consent of the examiner/reviewer is necessary.

§ 2 Transfer of rights to the public

I publish the above document under the following free license (please check applicable):

§ 3 Declaration of copyright and personal rights

1. I assure that I own the copyright of all parts of the work and that the publication will not infringe on third-party rights, in particular third-party personal rights or copyright. If alleged or actual infringement of the rights of third parties is asserted, I will notify the repository operator immediately. I exempt the Technische Universität Berlin from any claims of third parties.*
2. I assure that the electronic version is identical in form and content to potentially existing print versions. ****
3. If the document or its metadata contain any personal information (e. g. CV), I agree with their publication.
